HILLTRIBE COMMUNITIES

The scenic hills of Northern Thailand are home to hilltribe communities who belong to various ethnic minority groups. Some of these groups have been cut off from modern society well into the 20th century, and continue to live traditional lifestyles. Particularly compelling are the colorful, embroidered textiles that many of the groups continue to wear. There are opportunities to visit and interact with hilltribe communities in a way that promotes responsible, ethical tourism.

We recommend a visit to the Lisu and Lahu hilltribes. An excellent precursor to a village visit is the informative Hilltribe Museum in Chiang Mai, to enrich your knowledge of these fascinating people.

WHY NOT EXPERIENCE A SMALL GROUP JOURNEY?

One of the Hilltribe communities in Northern Thailand is the Mae Klang Luang. Travel on the Taste of Thailand or Thailand Discovery, to visit this community and gain valuable insights into the daily lives and customs of these villagers.
